Masks will protect our children and teachers

Comments *

I am writing to emphasize the importance of wearing masks in our classrooms when our children go back to school one week from today.

Layers of protection including proper ventilation, hand washing, and wearing masks are effective in ensuring safety. If we aren't doing all three of those things consistently in every classroom in every school, then we aren't doing our best to protect our children and staff.

Without wearing masks, we are 100% certain to have quarantines and infections disrupt the educational process. We need to do our best to prevent this and the procedures to do so are easy and already in place. Last spring these very same people who protested to get students back to in-person instruction are now protesting to do away with a policy that will be vital in keeping them there. Their illogical argument will ultimately result in more zoom classes and more mental health issues in students.

There are school districts in Florida, Texas, and Oklahoma suing their governors for the right to fully protect their students with masks. The idea that people are outside protesting for the right to endanger my children is absolutely unfathomable.

I know that the state and county requires masks. I am asking that you strongly enforce this policy as you offer alternative educational opportunities for those who cannot or will not wear masks.
